Wait Until Dark

by Frederick Knott

2 - 9 February 2008

Susie's husband is asked to hold a doll for a mysterious woman as they embark from an aeroplane - but the woman quickly vanishes. Mike and Carlino are small-time hoods who find the woman's body in Susie's apartment, dumped there by her partner, the notorious Harry Rote.

Susie's blindness is the key to them searching her apartment for the doll, which contains smuggled drugs. Mike pretends to be an old friend of Susie's husband and together the crooks fabricate the story of a police investigation - with the doll their only objective.

Rote is a killer, and his stalking of Susie becomes more and more obvious as the story unfolds - leaving us with the question: just how can a blind woman defend herself...?

The cast features Fiona McGahren, Matt Clowry, Andrew Kelly, Clive Madel, Chris Manning-Perry and Hannah Jacobs.

Directed by Paul Lay, this is an edge-of-the-seat thriller that's guaranteed to be an intense evening's entertainment.

Tickets £6.50
